DENVER, CO, September 22, 2013 /24-7PressRelease/ -- Stockholm University, located in Sweden, is one of the largest universities in Scandinavia. With nearly 40,000 students attending the University each year, Stockholm University is home to multiple campuses and is the largest population in Scandinavia. Mark Majzner, a native of Australia, attained his Master's Degree in Business Administration from Stockholm University in 2002. Over a decade since successfully graduating from Stockholm University, Mark Majzner is celebrating the past ten years of professional achievement he has enjoyed as a result of the top-notch education he received.

Founded in 1878, Stockholm University is rich in Scandinavian history and has become one of the most respected institutes of higher learning in the world. Rated in the top two hundred of universities across the globe, Stockholm University attracts both local and international students because of its reputation for providing students with an outstanding educational foundation in numerous opportunities for professional development. Regarding the time he spent at Stockholm University, Mark Majzner had this to say: "I absolutely loved attending Stockholm University and felt that the time I spent there was truly worth the effort and proved to be rewarding."

Stockholm University offers prospective students a range of degree programs to include undergraduate degrees, master's programs, and doctoral programs. Known as a public research institution, Stockholm University is helping to lead the effort to find cures for disease, uncover discoveries, and share information with the world. Although Mark Majzner has over twenty years of experience as a professional businessman, he feels that the education received at Stockholm University prepared him mid-career to take on larger projects and approach problem-solving with optimism and creativity.

Stockholm University has been the educational home to many distinguished individuals including Nobel Prize winners, prime ministers, and even royalty. For Mark Majzner, attending a university with such a rich history was truly inspiring and a life-changing event. Regarding Stockholm University's impressive history, Mark Majzner had this to say: "Attending class at Stockholm University was great because, when sitting in class, it was easy to imagine what education was like over a hundred years ago."

Mark Majzner notes that one of the best parts about his academic career at Stockholm University was the faculty. Stockholm University takes pride in hiring accomplished professionals with clearly defined specialties, providing students with world-class educators that can serve as industry mentors. With a top-notch education gained at Stockholm University, Mark Majzner attained his advanced degree in business. Several years after graduation, Mark Majzner helped to establish Sweden's first e-commerce wine company.

Although this was not Mark Majzner's first venture into business, it was perhaps one of his career's biggest achievements as he accomplished something in Sweden that no one in the country's history was able to successfully complete. Mark Majzner believes that the quality education received at Stockholm University provided him with the confidence and skills necessary to achieve this type of success. Mark Majzner looks back on his academic career at Stockholm University with fond memories in hopes to inspire others to pursue their educational and professional goals.

About: Mark Majzner is a business development specialist who resides in Australia with his wife and two children.