(PRLEAP.COM) SourceSecurity.com is pleased to announce the launch of its US edition (<http://us.sourcesecurity.com>), to fulfil the information needs of a continuously growing community of security professionals from the Americas.

While retaining all the core features, functionality and content of SourceSecurity.com, which have contributed to making it the global leader among security media, the US edition will also feature content specifically relevant for the American market. Among other things, this will include greater coverage of products available in this market as well as 'local' security news, analysis and commentaries. "The US edition is our response to the rapidly growing visitor traffic from the Americas, where we are already among the top 2 security media," said Tony Saville, Publisher of SourceSecurity.com. "With a captive traffic of over 50,000 visits per month from the Americas, our extensive content development capabilities and suite of targeted and effective marketing options, the US Edition offers both site visitors and marketers a very strong proposition.

"The response to the site has been extremely positive in just the few weeks since its launch.
