

(PRLEAP.COM) July 11, 2014 - Training for Excellence, a Florida based training provider announced that the company has launched a brand new website along with the introduction of their latest training program, "How To Provide On-The-Job Training and Coaching." This workshop is geared toward field supervisors and senior employees who are assigned the task of training, coaching and mentoring other employees within various organizations. The new company website, WeHelpTrainers.com, has an entirely new look and feel and more closely reflects the learning experience of participants who attend Training for Excellence (T4E) workshops.

Donna Garnvik, lead trainer at Training for Excellence, possesses 15 years of training and facilitation experience. She's very excited about the prospect of helping supervisors and managers in the oil and gas industry overcome specific obstacles as a large number of veteran employees retire and new employees have to take their place. Such dramatic changes in workplace demographics affect the industry and have a number of consequences, including more workplace hazards, salary inflation and project delays.

"We've been working very hard to put all the pieces together for our newly developed On-The-Job Training and Coaching workshop. It was initially a response to a need in the oil & gas industry, but the program is now ready to be offered to a wider variety of companies across other industries. The fact that it was ready to go at the same time our new website was set to be launched was perfect timing for both us and our clients," Garnvik says.

Garnvik also comments on her satisfaction with the new website, WeHelpTrainers.com, which more accurately reflects what Training for Excellence is all about, and what the company offers employees in a supervisory position. "We are very happy about our new website and logo, both of which truly capture the essence of what our company is all about," Garnvik explains. Viewers of the new website will better be able to get a feel for what it is Training for Excellence has to offer those in a supervisory or managerial position. The website also highlights their main programs: On-site Train the Trainer Courses, Public Train the Trainer Courses and On-The-Job Training & Coaching Course.

Training for Excellence essentially provides a solution for supervisors and field operators to more effectively and efficiently train and coach their own staff to ensure competency standards and timelines are being met.

The new 2 day course is designed specifically with trainers and job coaches in mind who are responsible for the instruction and speed-to-competency of other employees within the organization. Training for Excellence provides on-site, public and private courses.

Training for Excellence Establishes New On-The-Job Training and Coaching Workshop and Website

Written by Australian Business

About Training for Excellence and WeHelpTrainers.com: Florida-based company Training for Excellence is well-renowned for their competitive edge in the training industry, and has made a name for itself by offering powerful and innovative training solutions for those in managerial positions who are responsible for the instruction of employees. Training for Excellence also offers guidance on clients' instructional design and lesson planning, and additionally offers PowerPoint design services and presentation skills training.

For more information about Training For Excellence, visit their website at WeHelpTrainers.com or call 800-697-9910.