

One Horizon Group Opens New Software R D Centre in Ireland

Written by Australian Business

BAAR, Switzerland, Sept. 17, 2013 /PRNewswire/ -- One Horizon Group, Inc. (OTCQB: OHGID) ("One Horizon" or the "Company"), which develops and licenses the world's most bandwidth efficient mobile voice over Internet Protocol ("VoIP") platform for smartphones, today announced it has opened a new software research and development office in the Nexus Innovation Centre on the campus of the University of Limerick in Ireland

Brian Collins, Horizon founder and Chief Technology Officer of One Horizon commented, "Growing our software research and development capacity alongside academia underlines our commitment to continue to create new technologies that will extend the power of our Horizon Call platform. I am very pleased with the caliber of engineering talent we have been able to attract with our initial hires, who collectively have decades of experience in high level projects at leading tech companies.

"By locating our expanded team at the Nexus Innovation Centre, we are immersing ourselves in one of the best environments to foster creative thinking and will be able to access world-class academic resources that are essential to developing next-generation technologies. As ever, our goal is to continue to deliver software optimizations to the world of mobile data technologies. At Nexus, we believe we can do this in a focused software research and development environment like no other," added Mr. Collins. "In addition, we expect that our presence in Ireland will provide One Horizon will favorable tax advantages and research and development support in the future as we further develop our presence in the country."

Andrea Deverell, Manager of the Nexus Innovation Centre said, "By having high quality software businesses such as One Horizon innovating within our entrepreneurial eco-system here at Nexus, we look forward to continued and commercially viable technology transfers that will benefit all involved, now and into the future."
