

It can be a very testing time in the life of any couple that is married or in a de-facto relationship, and they want to live permanently in Australia when one of the two is an Australian or New Zealand citizen or they are already a permanent resident in the country. Naturally, they wish to be together as soon as possible to enjoy a happy life.

However, it's not just as simple as hopping on a plane and getting on with things at the other end, as there are several hurdles to overcome before being allowed to settle. There are those who decide to go through the process themselves which can be time-consuming and often end in rejection. A far smarter way to take the hassle out of obtaining the partner visa in Australia offers is to employ the services of an agency for several reasons.

-

The rules are extremely strict when it comes to obtaining an Australian visa. There is a high percentage of rejections because couples aren't fully aware of everything that is required and innocently fall short when they could have been accepted with proper advice and planning. Having a rejection also means that any fees are non-refundable which can take a chunk out of a budget and affect further chances of approval, while causing undue stress and worry.

-

Simply thinking about who will have the most knowledge between a couple with ambition or an agent with their finger on the pulse with extensive understanding of the law should be enough to choose an expert. They have vast experience in dealing with many cases and will know the best way to formulate all the required paperwork to offer the best chance of a positive outcome. In the meantime, one of the partners may wish to know how to keep warm on a cold winter's night

-

With so much bureaucracy to overcome and documents to collate, it can take a lot of time, which is saved when an agent deals with it. They can ensure that the application becomes a strong one by putting together all that's required and omitting items that are often time-consuming yet not required by the authorities.

-

A migration agent must be registered by law and follow a code of conduct as set by the regulatory authorities. It is important for their professional status and livelihood to follow the right procedures and deliver positive applications on behalf of their clients, while also remaining up to date with any changes to the law.

-

Quite simply, a migration agent delivers the best chance of a visa application being accepted, while they communicate clearly with their clients throughout what can sometimes be a complicated process. They also know the differences between the different subclasses and can sometimes find a better option to make things easier.

Obtaining an Australian partner visa is complicated, and can cost lots of time and money, with a migration agent the best way to take the hassle out of the process and achieve a successful application.