

WESTERN AUSTRALIA, September 19, 2013 /24-7PressRelease/ -- Nat Alexander, Project Planner for Brockman Mining Australia, has been recognized by Worldwide Who's Who for showing dedication, leadership and excellence in mining project management.

A 16-year veteran of the minerals and mining industry, Mr. Alexander brings to his position an abundant knowledge of the mechanical processes used to procure precious materials. Currently in charge of setting up, testing the efficiency of and implementing a planning program for the Marillana Project, the largest of Brockman's principal projects in the Pilbara Region of Western Australia, he previously served as a site planner for the Fortescue Metals Group and as a project planner for Abesque Engineering Limited. Though he is a well-qualified manager with a solid background and years of experience, he is open-minded, receptive to constructive feedback, and able to work well with others.

An experienced project planner and scheduler, Mr. Alexander has worked primarily in the petrochemical and mining industries. His 10 years of Australian work experience have mainly concerned mine sites, where he worked as a project and lead planner. He is a reliable and dependable person with good listening skills, and a team participant with firm views on how to get the project completed within the recommended time and budget. Through careful consideration, he evaluates all likely consequences before taking action or making decisions.

While technology can never replace an efficient, knowledgeable human, it can certainly enhance that person's productivity - thus, Mr. Alexander is a skilled user of Oracle's P6 Enterprise Project Portfolio Management software, which assists in project planning and execution. Within the coming years, he looks to build upon his existing educational background with a project management diploma.
