

ATLANTA, GA, December 19, 2013 /24-7PressRelease/ -- Leadership Strategies now offers its award-winning line of facilitation training courses as private courses, which can be taught in your company's office.

A private facilitation training course can help employees learn the fundamental principles of facilitation. These fundamentals are supported by more than 100 application techniques.

An instructor guides employees through several videotaped practice sessions, followed by feedback from both their instructor and their peers.

Effective Facilitator courses can last for either three or four days. The four-day course includes video recording on the last day.

Businesses trust Leadership Strategies' teaching and certification methods because the company trains more certified facilitators than anyone on the East Coast. The International Association of Facilitators has also used its instructors and materials for its pre-conference workshops for the past four years.

Leadership Strategies can easily customize private facilitation courses with case studies and content to meet any specific needs a company may have.

"We are pleased to be able to offer in-office, individualized corporate facilitation courses to private companies," says Kris Casariego, Director of Marketing of Leadership Strategies. "We feel that employees learn best when given the opportunity to learn with their coworkers, the convenience of being able to attend classes in the office and the personal attention our instructors can provide in that environment."

Each of the facilitator training courses Leadership Strategies offers can be booked for private sessions. Learn more or schedule a training course at <http://www.leadstrat.com/>.
