

RALEIGH, NC, October 08, 2014 /24-7PressRelease/ -- Triangle-based CEO and Technical Agility expert Daniel Berlin, one of a select group of notable industry thought leaders, to speak at InnoVate Virginia's fourth annual technology conference. The one-day symposium, sponsored by Agile Richmond User Group, will be held at the Glen Allen Cultural Arts Center in Richmond, VA, Friday, October 24 7:30 am to 6:00 pm.

Berlin is the founder of Slick Rabbit, LLC, a consulting services company focused on Agile coaching and training. As an independent consultant he has more than 10 years hands-on software delivery experience with major clients in a variety of industries, including finance, entertainment, software and media. With a deep understanding of all aspects of Agile software delivery, from project management to Agile testing, he enjoys sharing his passion for Agile. Dan is a regular speaker at software related user groups and conferences, and is active in the Agile and developer communities.

"Together we are shaping the future of Agile," says Berlin. "The Agile revolution is happening right now and it's exciting to be part of it. Agile is no longer just for startups and small teams, large enterprise software groups are now reaping the benefits. It applies across many businesses today. The Agile approach emphasizes shorter delivery cycles with frequent customer collaboration and faster responses to change. My clients' bottom line business operations have benefited greatly by improving their Technical Agility."

Conference attendees can earn up to eight Professional Development Units (PDUs) to maintain credentials as PMP, PMI, PGMP and others. For more information, visit www.innovatevirginia.com
