NEW YORK, NY, November 05, 2014 /24-7PressRelease/ -- Great news for employees, HR industry insiders and anyone looking to find answers to all their vacation tracking questions!

Newly launched website

VacationTrackingForum.com

is a forum designed to open discussions on vacation tracking topics, such as absentee tracking, attendance tracking, sick days, business vacation calendar approval and more. Employees can raise technical questions to colleagues about new applications and cloud software that tracks vacations, in order to post questions. They could also post questions, share knowledge and insights with experts and colleagues. Technical developers are also regularly checking the forum and helping to answer questions in a timely manner. Even if you're new to vacation tracking software or not yet familiar with how to use them, it's a great place to start a general discussion and gain support from others struggling with the same issues.

Some examples of questions may be how to calculate sick days and pro rate vacation entitlements or find best practices on how to manage your attendance tracking. There's even an area to post off topic discussions that you may need to get off your chest. Chances are if you have a question or comment, others will also share in your views.

The main advantage of this forum is to gather news and knowledge in one place, where employees and human resource managers can easily visit, versus searching blogs and articles from several different locations.
