

PEARLAND, Texas, Dec. 24, 2013 /PRNewswire-iReach/ -- Being jailed is never fun, but the experience can become even more traumatizing if the individual cannot afford to post bail and return to his or her everyday life.

Garza Bail Bonds offers consultations to those in jail who cannot pay the amount that the judge set as bail to help set up payment plans that will help free the individual as quickly as possible. These consultations are available to those who have been arrested for any offense, including felony, misdemeanor, or traffic violations. Consultations are also available for family members and loved ones of the arrested.

Bail is not always granted for those who have been taken to jail. Having a lengthy criminal record, being deemed likely to flee, appearing as a continual threat to the community, committing certain serious drug crimes, and committing an offense that is punishable by life imprisonment or death are among common reasons bail is denied. In the vast majority of other cases, however, bail is allowed: the only thing standing between jail and freedom is coming up with the necessary funds.

During these consultations, Garza Bail Bonds will discuss how to help the jailed individual produce these funds. Skilled bondsmen will estimate the amount of time it will take to secure the jailed party's release and provide the fee that will be applied. This fee can be as low as seven percent, or it may involve payment plans that only require 3.5 percent down. Bail bonds from Garza Bail Bonds can be secured twenty-four hours a day in person, via the phone, or via fax machine. Once the bond is posted, the individual is released from jail with immediacy, allowing them to return to their regular activities, jobs, and schedules. If needed, the bondsman can also appear in court on behalf of the arrested party.
