

Current practices in reporting on behavioural genetics can mislead the public

Written by Business News

“Media reports about behavioural genetics unintentionally induce unfounded beliefs, therefore going against the educational purpose of scientific reporting,” writes the University of Montreal’s Alexandre Morin-Chassé, following his study of 1,500 Americans.

Read more <http://www.alphagalileo.org/ViewItem.aspx?ItemId=148211&CultureCode=en>