

Small change in blood acidity could prove detrimental to kidney disease patients

Written by Business News

A University of Manchester scientist has discovered that very small changes in the level of acidity in blood may have a detrimental impact on the health of patients with kidney disease.

Read more <http://www.alphagalileo.org/ViewItem.aspx?ItemId=148565&CultureCode=en>