

How society makes it worse for people who self-harm

Written by Business News

Social attitudes are reinforcing the negative beliefs towards people who self-harm, according to research. The first ever study of the life stories of people who self-harm and who were also diagnosed with a personality disorder revealed that several spoke of being refused pain relief while being sutured by hospital staff. Others had met staff who thought they were immune to pain because they self-harmed

Read more <http://www.alphagalileo.org/ViewItem.aspx?ItemId=148627&CultureCode=en>