

A virtual reality brain training game can detect mild cognitive impairment (MCI), a condition that often pre

Written by Business News

Greek researchers demonstrated the potential of a virtual supermarket cognitive training game as a screening tool for patients with mild cognitive impairment (MCI) among a sample of older adults. MCI is a condition that often predates Alzheimer's disease (AD) and is characterized by memory loss and inability to execute complex activities such as financial planning.

Read more <http://www.alphagalileo.org/ViewItem.aspx?ItemId=148722&CultureCode=en>