

U.S. paleontologist names carnivorous reptile that precedes dinosaurs

Written by Business News

Virginia Tech paleontologist Sterling Nesbitt's latest addition to the vernacular is Nundasuchus, a 9-foot-long carnivorous reptile with steak knifelike teeth and bony plates on the back. The fossil was found in Tanzania.

Read more <http://www.alphagalileo.org/ViewItem.aspx?ItemId=148954&CultureCode=en>