

Researchers develop a new technology that will enable the universalization of HD television

Written by Business News

Researchers of the Universitat Politècnica de València, in collaboration with the company SAPEC, have developed a novel technology that will facilitate the broadcasting of High Definition (HD) television services in 1080 interlaced format by using the new-generation video compression standard, HEVC.

Read more <http://www.alphagalileo.org/ViewItem.aspx?ItemId=149140&CultureCode=en>