

ATLANTA, Jan. 17, 2014 /PRNewswire-iReach/ -- WorthPoint (www.worthpoint.com) will be returning to Chicago this month as Worthologist Martin Willis will be offering antique valuations and advice to visitors at the Randolph Street Market Festival's 2014 kickoff Wonderful Winter Market on Jan. 25 and 26.

Shoppers attending the market on Jan. 25 are encouraged to bring one antique or collectible item to the WorthPoint booth where Willis will be stationed for a free valuation. Willis will also discuss with shoppers about the latest trends in antiques, offer tips on what details to look for when shopping and demonstrate WorthPoint's online technology that provides quick and efficient information about their possible purchases. Willis will be at the booth from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

WorthPoint has hosted valuation booths at the Randolph Street Market in the past.

The January Wonderful Winter Market kicks off eleventh season for the Randolph Street Market Festival, an internationally recognized European-style indoor and outdoor shopping extravaganza in Chicago's historic West Loop that is the go-to destination for area treasure hunters, fashionistas, designers, Hollywood set decorators and people who want to see and be seen.

One the world's leading online resource for valuing art, antiques, and collectibles, WorthPoint fits perfectly into the market's mix. "With WorthPoint, we will be able to expose our exhibitors, attendees and fans to the value of their purchased items from our show, whether it's onsite or online," says Randolph Street Market founder Sally Schwartz.

The festival features fully integrated mini-markets all under one roof and it is home to the world famous Chicago Antique Market Festival and Indie Designer Market. The January Market will also boasts Chicago-based foodie vendors, chocolate and candy gifts and the Market Bar stocked with beer and wine to serve as a treat for guests.
