With offices throughout greater Los Angeles and around the globe, Beverly Hills Physicians has ended those incredibly persistent, hormonally driven urges for countless patients. This means they can finally make the significant changes to their diet in order to finally lose weight. A gastric sleeve or lap band has been, for countless patients, the first step on the path to a new, healthier life. The medical group's outstanding roster of leading board certified bariatric surgeons is there to ensure that procedures create long-lasting change for the better.

While there is no doubt that it is vastly easier to lose weight following a bariatric procedure, that doesn't mean that outstanding results are automatic. Patients need to learn new habits and adjust to their new body's capabilities. That's why Beverly Hills Physicians makes a point of providing detailed follow-up and assistance to all weight loss patients.

BHP doctors and support staff monitor patients' progress in a highly detailed and personalized manner – but that is only the beginning. Weight loss patients are also able to access the services of a leading nutritionist as well as psychological counseling. The result is that men and women, following bariatric surgery with Beverly Hills Physicians, consistently achieve long-term weight loss in the healthiest way possible.

Anyone who is interested in learning more about weight loss procedures through Beverly Hills Physicians can take advantage of a free consultation with a bariatric surgeon. At these meetings, interested men and women can learn specific information regarding their weight loss options. At that time, patients will also be introduced to a consultant who can help with the various details of obtaining surgery, including administrative and financial matters. Specifically, patients whose medical insurance may not cover weight loss procedures can learn about payment plans that make it accessible even to patients on tight budgets.
