

SPOKANE, Wash., Sept. 25, 2013 /PRNewswire/ -- People to People Ambassador Programs, the leader in global educational travel experiences, has announced a unique travel program to Cuba that will allow college students to earn college credits from Eastern Washington University during winter break, get career advice from industry leaders and see iconic Cuba as only People to People can deliver it.

People to People's college program to Cuba, "Development Through Mentoring," will provide delegation members with in-person and online mentoring opportunities to help students develop networking and career strategies to make their job search more successful upon graduation, in addition to offering a language learning component. The collegiate program to Cuba departs from Miami on December 13, 2013 and returns on December 21, 2013.

Language Learning Inclusion In partnership with Rosetta Stone, People to People student ambassadors traveling on winter programs to Cuba or Peru also have the option to participate in an interactive, online Spanish language program to prepare for their trip. This special opportunity marks the first time that People to People has offered a language learning module in its pre-travel curriculum.
