Are you aware of all the link building opportunities in your region? Most blog owners and content marketers don't realize that huge opportunities exist close by. Below are some smart ways to find link building opportunities in your region.

Contact Other Local Website Owners

Sometimes, to progress online you have to go offline and talk to other people. Many other local businesses and organizations have high quality websites and are only too willing to add your website link to their website. This can give your website great local exposure and help with your website rankings.

Use Link Building Tools and Services

A wide range of tools and services have been developed that automate your link building activities and make the whole process of link building run a lot smoother. Link building software products like Link Discovery allow you to easily research and create local, national and international campaigns.

Get Listed in Local Directories and other Local Websites

Almost every region in the world has a number of different local directories that allow you to add your business details. In most cases, these directory websites also allow you to add your website link in your listing. The more established directories rank well on the search engines and you can piggyback on their success by adding your listing. Some directories allow you to add a link for free, while others may charge a small fee for the privilege.

Submit Content to a Local Newspaper or Magazine

Local newspapers and magazines are always looking for fresh content and these publications reach an extremely targeted, local audience. Most of these publications have an online presence, which increases their reach even more. Submitting content related to your business or website to local newspapers and magazines gives you a lot of exposure, and these newspapers and magazines may also be willing to include your website link in their online edition, which can prove to be valuable to website owners looking for backlinks.

Social Media

Social media websites are used by millions of people around the world. They are the perfect places to communicate with local people who may be interested in your website. If you publish content regularly on your website or blog, you can use social media to greatly increase the audience who reads this content.

Simply adding a link to every blog post from your social media accounts notifies others of your latest updates and there is a much better chance these links to your blog posts will be shared with other social media users. This sharing can greatly increase the number of web pages that link to your website from a wide range of sources.
