It would help if you had a bond when you unexpectedly find yourself faced with a warrant for over speeding, misdemeanor, or federal crimes. For you to make an informed decision, you need to know stuff about; how to get out of jail, how bail bonds work. It is vital to know the available bail bonds options such as cash bail, surety bail, none surety bail, and conditional bail. Choosing reliable, top-quality bail bonds service providers such as Connecticut Bailbonds Group that have a variety of bail bonds options is critical if you have to be bonded out in the shortest time possible.

What Is Bail?

Bail is the conditional release from jail as you await trial. When bail is set, the court imposes pre-trial restrictions on you to ensure that you adhere to the judicial process as scheduled by the court. The court may set cash amounts or an equivalent in collateral, or bonds. Bail allows you to attend your hearings from out of jail. Once your case comes to a conclusion, whichever way, your bail amount is returned to you. Should you fail to appear for your hearings, the entire bail amount is forfeited.

Cash bail

Cash bail is the money paid to the court to secure your release from jail as insurance that you will attend your hearings at the appointed time. Cash bail means that the court will accept only cash deposits for the set amount. Bonds and other collateral will not be preferred when you opt for a cash bail settlement.

Cash bails or bonds require that you deposit the full bail money to the court or the jail where you are being held. The payments, which in most cases are hefty amounts, are to be made before your trials begin. Your bail money is returned to your situation, should you flee your trials, the bail money is forfeited.

Surety Bonds

Surety bonds involve three parties in the bailing process; the defendant, the bondsman, and the court. The bondsman acts as warrantee, who assures that you; (defendant) attend all your trials. Surety bonds become your best option when you do not have the hefty amount set for your cash bail.

When you opt for a surety bond, you pay a premium (usually a percentage of the set bail amount) to your bail bonds agent. Your bondsman then helps you with the bail bonds process and posts your bail to the court. After the court receives your surety, you get released from jail until the conclusion of your case. Should you fail to attend the hearings, your bail bonds agent can file an arrest warrant against you. Your bail bonds agent hires bounty hunters to find you and bring you to court within a set time. Should your bail bondsman fail to locate you within that time, the bail amount is forfeited.

Non- Surety Bond

A non-surety bond is your written word of honor, stipulating that you will appear for your hearing on the set date. It is virtually a bond in which you do not post cash or deposit collateral to be released from jail. You are issued on your apperception, and the court takes you at your word that you will attend the hearing at the set time. A non-surety bond promise to appear in court has an amount attached to it. Depending on the severity of your crime, the court may grant you a non-surety bond.

Should you fail to attend the hearing as agreed, the court issues an arrest warrant, and when you get caught, the bail amount set will be much higher.

Conditional Bail

When you get conditional bail, it means that you will have to abide by the set rules stated by the court. Conditional bail or default bond may require a court process to agree on the bond conditions before any payment can be obtained.

The conditions of the bail are set at the discretion of the court. Still, some such demands may include reporting to law enforcement officers every day, live at a specific address, surrender your passport, not associating with particular persons, not going within a certain distance of one particular place.

You are required to comply with all the set conditions; otherwise, you will be in breach of bail, and an arrest warrant could be issued to have you arraigned in court.
