BIDs work hard to get new development to get underway and all businesses are equipped to capitalise from them. A BID strives to make a city or town a better workplace, live and visit-development encourage more visitors so Bids strategize to make sure that the city fully maximizes off the opportunities. For example - Southampton has been working hard on the best way to watermark development and the cultural quarter to make sure that the city reaps all the benefits possible. The developments provide opportunities for BIDs to hold more events and drive footfall to the place .

Environment And Sustainability Practices

BIDs are mostly heavily involved in green and Infrastructure Projects, making the location more attractive to visitors my friend driving repeat visits. Projects include anything from transport to safety and security to cleaning. The project self increase footfall into a town transport makes the area a more accessible and clean and safe environment that people want to return to.

There are companies which work towards sustainability and have numerous schemes in place. Their strategies aim to reduce delivery's carbon emissions. They have zero to landfill services also. They will collect recyclable waste from businesses for free, reducing waste collection vehicles, the number of waste sacks in the street and business costs.

Enablers Of Events Or Projects

BIDs create events to encourage higher footfall and also help to build awareness. BIDs can bring together many shops, hotels and restaurants to celebrate the luxury and iconic shopping destinations. BIDs organise pop up stands along the street which includes boutique clothing and jewellery, food tasting and also live bands which the surrounding bars supply outside seating and food to enjoy while watching.

There are many more aspects to BIDs than mentioned above, they are working hard constantly to develop, improve and introduce innovations to a district.
