

LDS.BIZ Re-Launches As Social Network For Mormons

Written by Australian Business

LEHI, Utah, Sept. 23, 2013 /PRNewswire/ -- LDS.BIZ was unveiled today as the revamped social networking site for Mormons. The simplified site is anticipated to help consumers and business professionals with similar Christian standards connect with each other in a new way.

"LDS.BIZ allows the LDS community (and any other user with similar values) to connect with each other for help – with business, partnerships, advice, training, and friendship – in one place," said LDS.BIZ CEO David Bradford. "We have had the last 4 years to work on the model, and now is the time for the LDS community to shine online."

Visitors to the LDS.biz site have already been commenting positively on the new design and functionality throughout the beta period of the last few weeks. Users can also register for several great giveaways from a variety of sellers in celebration of the site re-launch.

"I am loving the new @ldsbiz site. It helps me as an author connect with potential fans!," tweeted Adrienne Monson @adriennemonson .

"The last 4 years of projects and sources of income have been the result of meeting wonderful people through this website," said Ferdinand Divinagracia of Cebu City, Philippines and owner of a Cebu Web Design. "My offers through LDS.BIZ have been an incredible catalyst for growing my business and I look forward to more success with LDS.BIZ."
