

MACON, Ga., Oct. 15, 2013 /PRNewswire/ -- CDA Technical Institute (CDA) once again turned to award-winning higher education website design firm, Third Wave Digital, seeking a redesign utilizing the most advanced innovations in college website design. Recognizing that more and more students are accessing websites from their phones and tablets, Third Wave developed a responsive website that provides CDA's users with a seamless user experience across the widest variety of platforms. Now, <https://www.commercialdivingacademy.com/> can be easily viewed from any device.

Visitors to the new responsive CDA website are immediately immersed into the world of commercial diving through an interactive graphic novel presentation. The innovative presentation enhances the overall visual impact of the website and immerses visitors into the website experience. Allen Garber, Chief Administrative Officer at CDA cited the graphic novel as one of many reasons CDA chose Third Wave Digital to overhaul its online web presence. "We turned to Third Wave Digital because they have repeatedly demonstrated the ability to create innovative, engaging and interactive designs that reflect our specialized offerings."

For potential students to have a positive experience on a college website, ease of navigation is essential. The CDA responsive website provides the flexibility necessary to reach students no matter what platform they are using.

In addition to a custom college website design, Third Wave Digital provides a complete content management solution with an easy to use, full featured CMS. This system gives CDA site administrators access to a robust set of tools that allow them to make content updates, manage site pages and navigation, assign and monitor users, and much more. Third Wave will also continue to provide CDA with powerful hosting and support after the launch to meet any needs of the new college website. This comprehensive range of services reflects the strength of Third Wave Digital's capabilities, says Creative Director, Myron Bennett. "We provide a single location for higher education institutions to turn to for creative design, advanced web development, complete content management and reliable, enterprise-class hosting," said Bennett.
