

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 18, 2013 /PRNewswire/ -- As one of the most requested cosmetic procedures in the U.S., rhinoplasty can dramatically alter a person's face. However, what some patients may not realize when considering rhinoplasty in Los Angeles is that the chin and the nose have an intricate relationship and when one is altered, the other is affected. In fact, a chin implant can dramatically enhance a person's profile. Of course, while some patients are a good candidate for chin augmentation, some do best with only rhinoplasty. However, as seen in the Hills Aesthetics rhinoplasty before and after gallery, patients often opt for a combined rhinoplasty and chin augmentation after learning that this route would give them the best cosmetic improvement.

Although less commonly requested than rhinoplasty, the facial plastic surgeons of Hills Aesthetics know how a chin augmentation surgery can create a beautiful jawline. While the patient may not be aware of the precise shape would be best for his or her face, Dr. Aminpour routinely helps patients in determining precisely how to alter the face to achieve the best outcome. For example, while some patients may think their nose is too big, they may not realize that the fact that a recessed chin has the effect of making the nose appear even larger. Another complimentary procedure is slight liposuction of the neck, which can make the jawline appear even more defined.

Dr. Aminpour is sure to communicate with his patients on what is possible with their inherent beauty, natural shape and reverence for ethnic features. For example, by utilizing computer imaging in pre-surgery consultations, Dr. Aminpour is able to manipulate a photo of the patient's face while discussing options for cosmetic improvement. This helps the patient communicate what outcome they hope to achieve, and often, patients learn from seeing their planned metamorphosis that a chin augmentation would dramatically improve their facial harmony and balance. Aspects of the nose that can be changed include altering the height or shape of the bridge, changing the tip position, or even the depth of the starting point of the nose, called the radix. A simulated chin augmentation in various sizes also helps the patient determine what would look best as they see how intricate the relationship is between the nose and chin.

Double board-certified in facial plastic surgery and otolaryngology, Dr. Aminpour is intimately familiar with the complex, delicate anatomy of the nose and its underlying structures. As the lead plastic surgeon at Hills Aesthetics, Dr. Aminpour has built a staff that is passionate about
