

LONDON, September 20, 2013 /PRNewswire/ --

The UK's first potty training tour enters its final week as the Pull-Ups® potty training bus visits parents in Crayford, Sydenham, Ashford and Tunbridge Wells.

After visiting 20 towns, talking to thousands of parents, and entertaining thousands more little ones, the bus will be making its final stop on Sunday 29th September.

The vibrant and interactive Pull-Ups® potty training bus offers parents and children the chance to learn all about toilet training, day and night, in a playful and engaging environment.

On board is a mini bathroom splash play area and a mock-up bedroom. Before leaving, everyone has their instant graduation photo to tie in with the recent Huggies® Pull-Ups® television advertisement.

Huggies® Pull-Ups® brand ambassador and psychologist Emma Kenny says: 'Potty training doesn't have to be a time of contention or anxiety for parents. Using Huggies® Pull-Ups® throughout this journey will help your child reach the end goal of graduating to big kid pants.

For those parents unsure of how to tackle this stage in their little ones development should pay a visit to the bus while they still can to learn about the benefits of choosing Huggies® Pull-Ups® and Pull-Ups® Night-time as part of their child's potty training journey.'
