

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Oct. 7, 2013 /PRNewswire/ -- A registered Japanese medical device, which was formerly only available in hospitals and medical clinics in Japan, is now available to U.S. consumers to quickly transform their city tap water into the healthiest drinking water in the world. Japan, a leader in water research, has discovered the way to wellness and longevity by turning ordinary tap water into electrically restructured, hexagonal, ionized alkaline water. It is also referred to as "Miracle Water" by Japanese users.

Electrolysis is a process where electricity is passed through electrodes composed of precious metals with the ability to attract ions that conduct electricity. The ions that are naturally present in water are then concentrated into clusters of positively and negatively charged ions and then separated by a membrane. This process restructures the original city tap water clusters into smaller hexagonal clusters that are either positively or negatively charged. This simultaneously creates both alkaline 8.5 - 9.5 pH water for drinking, and acidic 4.5 - 5.5 pH acid, ionized water for topical use.

Super hydrating and a powerful antioxidant, it may possibly be the most powerful antioxidant on the planet. Alkaline water balances the acidity in the body, allowing it to do what it was designed to do, heal itself. According to experts, subtle changes in the pH of the body's "inner sea" can affect overall health, feeling of well-being, level of fatigue, pain, weight and athletic performance. pH balance and acid buffering are crucial to human health and slowing the aging process. With claims ranging from reduction and/or elimination of medications to asthma, allergies and high blood pressure gone, this very well may be the way to wellness in the near future and certainly worth looking into. Everyone needs to drink water, right? With the "Baby Boom" generation advancing in years, it's no surprise that there has been a parallel upsurge of interest about attracting wellness, improving health and slowing the aging process.

With holistic practitioners from Chiropractors to Naturopaths increasingly recommending it to

Advanced Alkaline Water Technology A Hit With Consumers In Sacramento California

Written by Australian Business

their patients, it is no wonder it is all the rave, especially in the Hollywood community.

Celebrities such as

Bill

Gates

and

Steven Tyler

of Aerosmith are purchasing multiple machines for all of their homes, businesses and even an extra for traveling! They say that once you drink this water, you can't be without it!

The Leveluk SD-501 model is approved as a medical device in Japan by the Ministry of Health and Wellness, the equivalent to our FDA. It has not received this status in the US, as of yet.

Contact:

Sacramento Water Authority(916) 425-8385Lisa Welge

SOURCE Sacramento Water Authority

RELATED LINKS <http://www.healthbeginswithwater.com> <http://www.sacramentowaterauthority.com>