) The Santa Rosa dentists at LehmanWaggener Professional Dental Corporation have announced the launch of a new, patient-focused website designed with patient's inquiries in mind. The website includes a links page with informative dental resources, as well as a frequently asked questions page to address common concerns on topics ranging from oral hygiene to more complex dental procedures.

"We know that today, most people use the internet to get all of their information, whether it be by searching key search words or by looking businesses up on review sites," said Dr. Waggener. "We want our website to be easily accessible to people searching for relevant dental health information."

The website possesses interactive attributes including dental videos and an oral health questionnaire feature to help patients make informed decisions about their dental health. Current and prospective patients now have access to webpages on the practice's dental team, explanations of various treatment options, and before and after photos of dental procedures when visiting the website. Some of the services offered at LehmanWaggener are:

Waggener commented, "In addition to providing oral health information, our patients, or prospective patients, also benefit from our website by viewing our Meet the Doctor and Meet the Team pages. Getting to know us a little before coming in for a visit seems to put our patients at ease."
