COLORADO SPRINGS, CO, September 14, 2013 /24-7PressRelease/ -- Dr. James Calvin of Associates in Dental Care in Colorado Springs knows how important the appearance of the front teeth are for his patients. One of the most common services he offers at his modern dental practice is fitting the front teeth for veneers.

Veneers are specially formed tooth-like wafers that cover imperfections in the natural teeth. The lightweight wafer is commonly made of porcelain or a resin-based material and is shaped to look just like a real tooth. Veneers are bonded to the natural teeth to ensure that they stay in place. With proper care, they can last for many years. Colorado Springs veneers patients can chew and talk naturally with them, and doesn't have to take them off at night.

Dr. Calvin is happy to offer this popular service to his patients with cosmetic problems that can easily be fixed, such as spacing and gaps. They are also useful for teeth that have been stained beyond repair, are too small or oddly shaped. Many patients are very insecure about these types of imperfections and are desperate for a solution. Dr. Calvin is an innovator in his field of dentistry and prioritizes patient needs while ensuring optimal dental health.

The Colorado Springs orthodontic dentist says, "Our goal at Associates in Dental Care is to stay abreast of the latest trends in dentistry and provide our patients with the results they desire. Many of my patients are insecure about their smiles, which can cause all sorts of problems in social settings and work situations. Dental veneers are simply the best way to give patients the flawless smile they've always wanted."

Veneers in Colorado Springs can be completed in just three appointments-the initial consultation and planning session, preparation of the teeth to receive the veneers and the final bonding of the veneers to the natural teeth. Patients leave Dr. Calvin's chair smiling wider and brighter than they have in years, or maybe even ever before.
