

Nulogy selected to support DHL Supply Chain's Packaging Services

Written by Australian Business

TORONTO, ON, September 14, 2013 /24-7PressRelease/ -- Nulogy and DHL Supply Chain have recently completed a global agreement for Nulogy to provide their PackManager and related Software as a Service (SaaS) solutions to DHL sites to manage and control value-adding packaging services.

Nulogy will deliver a fully outsourced hosting and support service to DHL as well as professional expertise during implementation projects, for a minimum period of three years. DHL's sites vary dramatically in profile, so the company takes full advantage of PackManager's flexible capabilities to support multiple languages, configurations with and without warehouse management systems, and sophisticated handling of customer quality and compliance standards. The PackManager solution will be implemented in multiple sites in the Americas, Asia Pacific and Europe.

"For PackManager to be recognized as the key operating system for DHL's contract packaging operations, Nulogy had to excel across many criteria," explained Nulogy CEO, Jason Tham. "We now look forward to further supporting growth for DHL and its customers as we accelerate our investment into the solutions and services we offer."
