

SAN DIEGO, CA, September 16, 2013 /24-7PressRelease/ -- Job growth in psychology is on the rise. PsychologyDegreeLink.com is an essential resource, providing people with information about careers, schools, trend insights and degrees in psychology. It also offers an easy-to-use tool to help people search for schools and programs in their local area and online.

Informational articles are constantly posted to help people learn about career opportunities and search for educational advancement. Topics range from how to earn a psychology license to what work is like in a specific psychology career. Media, spiritual, and industrial-organizational psychology are just a few of the career spotlight articles featured. The website also offers insight as to how one can explore best social work schools and how to get a PhD in counseling online.

For information about psychology degrees, there is a section where readers can get a synopsis on what it takes to become a psychologist or social worker. One can easily learn more about graduate degrees, salary and job expectations. For those unsure of whether a campus university or online university is right for them, there are resources available to weigh the pros and cons.

PsychologyDegreeLink.com, unlike other websites, is more than an article resource; it also assists people in finding the best psychology schools. The site provides a complimentary tool to help people find psychology schools based on their area of interest, educational level and desired degree. Using this tool, one receives instant access to school representatives who help guide him or her through the process and answer questions about the various psychology programs.

For those looking to simply browse psychology schools regardless of degree interest or location, there is a "Featured Psychology Schools" section houses a list of top psychology schools. One simply clicks on a school of interest for more information.

Offering trend insights and everyone one needs to know about psychology schools and career options, the website can turn one's interest in the psychology industry into a professional career. PsychologyDegreeLink.com is a one-stop source for all the information one needs to get started in the field of psychology.

PsychologyDegreeLink.com provides information on psychology degrees, schools, careers, and trends for anybody interested in psychology. Additionally, the website presents valuable information and resources that can help you become successful in your psychology career. For more information, please visit PsychologyDegreeLink.com .