Simply click the built-in floating bar, and the live chat box will open up. From there, all you have to do is enter your name, email address and a brief message. The church chairs specialists note that at the conclusion, you will automatically receive a copy of the chat transcript in your email inbox, which will help avoid any issues with orders that may arise.

Fills a Customer Need

Many companies, especially those in the e-commerce industry, such as Advantage Church Chairs, have started to recognize the importance of having a live chat function. Not only does this facilitate the buying process and thus make the transaction smoother for both the buyer and seller, it also gives the former the peace of mind knowing that he or she is doing business with a real person. When you have a question or concern, it can be very frustrating to have to communicate with an automated machine.

According to Matthew Washabaugh, President of Advantage Church Chairs, "This is something we have needed for quite some time, and I am very pleased with its success so far. We have already noticed a marked improvement customer satisfaction with respect to ordering, namely because issues can be resolved quickly and effectively."
