gladly welcomes the return of college students to the historic coastal city for another fall semester. As the fall season is sure to be full of pub crawls and football fanatics, this seafood restaurant continues to appeal to local diners--including college students--with its introduction of several new drink and food specials.

In a recent press statement, The Wreckfish explains, "Charleston is an incredibly diverse city that is also home to a wide range of college students. As a restaurant based in the artful and young neighborhood of North Charleston, we are proud to serve young adults who are looking to take a break away from the books, enjoy good company and chow down on delicious, fresh seafood caught locally."

The return of local college students--means a cultural revival for the residents of the city, as co-eds fill up bars, restaurants and nightclubs throughout Low Country. However, even though students are looking to have a great time, many restaurants recognize that the majority of these young consumers are drawn to money-saving deals. A recent article from The Charleston City Paper shows the accommodating nature of Charleston, listing numerous affordable hotspots for college students.

The Wreckfish also appeals to local residents, including academics, who are looking to have a delicious meal without having to empty their wallets. Noting that college students can often enjoy an adjusted schedule or longer weekends, the restaurant invites locals out for its All-You-Can-Eat Crab Legs special on Monday nights. In its press statement the Wreckfish explains, "Nothing is better than enjoying the beautiful fall weather of Charleston with friends and delicious seafood. Our All-You-Can-Eat Crab Legs deal on Monday nights from 6 P.M. to 9 P.M. is a perfect solution for the hungry college student who is looking for a place to hang out and enjoy delicious food."

While many college-aged consumers have continued to sing the praises of The Wreckfish and its All-You-Can-Eat Crab Legs, there are also additional deals that diners can enjoy all week long. For example, those who are over the age of twenty one can enjoy a wide selection of choice adult beverages at this popular North Charleston restaurant during its signature Happy Hour.

"Happy Hour is the place to be whether you're a college student looking for a crisp beer at a good price or a local diner looking to wind down after work.
