

CONCORD, CA, September 20, 2013 /24-7PressRelease/ -- It is important for parents teach their children proper oral hygiene habits and take them to their routine dental checkups. Healthy dental habits need to start early to prepare children for the rest of their lives. Baby teeth are not merely training wheels. Improper care can affect how baby teeth are lost and the way adult teeth form. This is why our skilled pediatric dentist in Concord dentist provides pediatric care at Dental Specialty Group.

Additionally, our Concord pediatric dentist provides sealants, cavity care and orthodontics. Sealants are thin coatings applied to the grooves of a tooth's bite. Teeth are more susceptible to cavities when these ridges are exposed, even with proper brushing. However, children often have trouble brushing thoroughly. Sealants provide extra protection. When it is too late for a sealant, the pediatric dentist at Dental Specialty Group treats cavities effectively and quickly to make the experience as easy as possible for nervous children.

After children lose their baby teeth, adult teeth come in. Unfortunately, they are not always straight. Sometimes this is a growth complication. Other times jaw alignment is to blame. Whatever the cause, our orthodontist in Concord offers some of the most comprehensive orthodontics in Concord. "Orthodontic conditions can affect more than a child's smile," said Dr. Khazaie, Concord dentist. "They can affect speech, the ability to chew and close the mouth comfortably."

Children in need of braces are encouraged to get them between the ages of 10 and 14, although braces can be worn at any age. During the preteen years, adult teeth have formed but the mouth continues to develop. Teeth are subsequently easier to straighten and more responsive to treatment.

For more information or to make an appointment, parents and guardians can visit the Dental Specialty Group's pediatric website at <http://www.dsgpediatric.com> or contact Dr. Khazaie's office at 925-680-1809.
