

CARY, NC, September 23, 2013 /24-7PressRelease/ -- Cary Pest Control today encouraged homeowners to stay alert for signs of mice, rat, rodent and squirrel infestations in their houses.

"Cooler weather is approaching and that means rodents will be seeking warmth," said Mike Sauls, Owner of Cary Pest Control. "This is the time to make sure there are no breaches in your home that rodents use to get into your attic or garage. You do not want mice, rats or squirrels to get into your attic or walls, make a nest and have babies."

Rodents generally have 3-6 babies in a litter and can reproduce every 2-3 months. There is also evidence that 20-30% of electrical fires can be traced to wiring that has been compromised by rodents. If rodent infestation is suspected, call Cary Pest Control to take care of your pest problem and properly remove them from the property.

Read more: <http://www.carypest.com/mice-rodent-control-cary.php?source=pr-2013-09>

<http://www.carypest.com/mice-rodent-control-raleigh.php?source=pr-2013-09>

<http://www.carypest.com/pest-control-raleigh.php?source=pr-2013-09>

About Cary Pest Control Cary Pest Control has been providing extermination pest control services in the Cary NC area since 2004. Mike Sauls, the owner/operator has been in the pest control industry for over 24 years and brings a wealth of experience to the homeowner. Cary Pest Control can deal with most insects, rodents and wasp or bees. When you need to get rid of pests - Call the experts: Cary Pest Control. Learn more on the company web site: <http://www.carypest.com/index.php?source=pr-2013-09>