

BARCELONA, SPAIN, September 25, 2013 /24-7PressRelease/ -- FXstreet.com, the Forex information website, is proud to announce the release of a totally new version of its Forex Brokers Comparative table, with much more data and a new layout to compare what each brokers offers.

The comparative criteria of the table are divided in 5 main areas with their own list of features: Company information (including headquarters, languages, regulation, payment methods, client support, news,...), Trading details (such as minimum deposit, pairs, leverage, scalping, hedging, PAMM,...), Demo Account (its size and duration), Platforms (the available platforms by brokers and their characteristics) and Spreads (if they're variable and their value per pair). For each broker, there are links to open a free demo or live account as well as a button to get in contact with the dealer.

The new design of the Brokers table makes the comparison much easier and quicker. The features of each area are presented in vertical columns, with the brokers displayed horizontally. If the broker offers a feature, it's represented by a green V. If not, it's a red X. On top of that, the navigation between tabs makes the comparison process very intuitive.

A filter has been added to the table. In the Advanced Search section of the page, the user can select different criteria from the list of brokers: country, language, regulator body, instruments, trading platforms and minimum deposits. All these criteria can of course be crossed to show narrower results.

Combining its new comparative table with a guide for choosing a broker, FXstreet.com now offers a complete section that helps Forex traders to find the dealer that best corresponds to their needs from our list of brokers. FXstreet.com only includes in its list regulated brokers and those which are not registered in safe havens.

"In our effort to provide the best tools for Forex Traders to make consistent and informed trading, this new comparative table represents another instrument for them to find their way in the market by having access to the best and most trusted dealers." said Carolina May, CEO of FXstreet.com "This table also offers brokers a simpler and more effective way to display their info."
