

CORAM, NY, September 25, 2013 /24-7PressRelease/ -- At the Pride Dental Group in Coram, Dr. Joseph Dumanski works with his patients to ensure they understand their dental health care. Visiting The Pride Dental Group for regular checkups and cleanings can help patients prevent many dental problems as well as to help patients maintain optimal oral health. In order to provide his patients with the best care possible, Dr. Joseph Dumanski, Coram, NY dentist, offers advice for his patients by sharing dental tips for when to visit The Pride Dental Group for treatment.

"Regular visits to my office allow us to find early signs of dental disease. By visiting our office at least twice a year, we can treat problems while they are still in a manageable stage. If you maintain these visits in addition to proper at home care, we can keep your smile glowing for longer," said Dr. Joseph Dumanski, a dentist in Coram, NY.

On average, visiting Coram's The Pride Dental Group twice a year works well for most people. However, many can get away with fewer visits while others need more frequent visits. People with very little risk of cavities or gum disease can do fine visiting Dr. Joseph Dumanski, a dentist in Coram, just once a year. Patients with a high-risk of dental disease might need to visit every three or four months. This high-risk group includes smokers, diabetics, people with current gum disease, people with weak immune response to bacterial infection and those who tend to get cavities or buildup of plaque.

Most symptoms and problems that occur with a patient's mouth, teeth, and gums are not emergencies and usually can wait for an appointment with Dr. Dumanski and his team of dental professionals at The Pride Dental Group. However, urgent attention is needed if a patient knocks out a tooth, chips or breaks a tooth, experiences a toothache, has gum swelling or redness, jaw pain, and an array of other complications. When an emergency arises, Dr. Dumanski, a dentist in Coram, urges his patients to contact his office immediately for the best care possible.

Good dental care is the best way to prevent non-traumatic problems with your teeth," said Dr. Dumanski, a dentist in Coram at The Pride Dental Group. "By brushing your teeth twice a day, and flossing at least once a day, you can help maintain a healthy, glowing smile."
