

EDMONTON, AB, September 26, 2013 /24-7PressRelease/ -- Orthodontic procedures are usually at the top of the list of patient demands when it comes to dental services. Unfortunately not many people are born with perfectly aligned teeth. Dr. Cindy Neufeld of Apple Dental Care in Edmonton is happy to offer her patients a variety of orthodontic services to straighten their smile out.

Orthodontics are largely considered cosmetic procedures, but in some cases they are necessary for the proper function of a patient's mouth. The position and alignment of a person's teeth can actually affect the way that he chews, the way he talks and even the way he behaves in social settings. Allowing major orthodontic issues to persist past childhood could be detrimental to a person's overall health, wellness and personal growth. It's no wonder that Edmonton dentist Dr. Neufeld specializes in correcting these common tooth-related issues.

The very first orthodontic procedures were performed using a primitive form of what are now known as metal braces. Braces take hold of the surface of each tooth and slowly move them into a better position over time.

A more modern and very popular orthodontic solution is Invisalign. Instead of waiting a year or more for metal braces to move the teeth into an ideal position, Invisalign can do the job in under a year -- sometimes in just a few months. Invisalign trays are clear and fit over the teeth, gently moving them into a better position. Dr. Neufeld offers these services and more at her Edmonton orthodontics practice.

"I offer a number of advanced ortho solutions for my patients that fit their specific needs. After examining their unique case and requirements I am able to suggest a treatment plan that gets them the smile of their dreams in the shortest time period possible," said Dr. Cindy Neufeld about Edmonton orthodontics.

These are two of the top concerns on the mind of her patients -- getting results and the length of time that it will take to straighten the teeth. Dr. Neufeld is very passionate about using modern orthodontic procedures to improve not just the teeth but also the overall look of the facial profile and jawline.
