

Colorado Clothing Company Releases New Line

Written by Australian Business

COLORADO SPRINGS, CO, September 26, 2013 /24-7PressRelease/ -- Positivity-centered clothing company Me.Glad released a new line of clothes this last week. This latest addition accompanies the recent reboot of the brand, which went on hiatus for some time. Me.Glad CEO/Founder Floyd Ralph says that this new catalogue is a fresher, more accurate representation of what the brand really is about.

The Colorado proud company, which started back in 2007, has grown from 20 shirts in a small shop in Breckenridge to being distributed by 30 shops in 5 different countries. The company was also noted by Transworld Business Magazine for their avant-garde designs and style, and their apparel have been worn by several noted athletes and local celebrities.

Their latest repertoire includes new apparel designed to "spread Positive Happy human moods for people to wear." This has been Me.Glad's goal since its conception six years ago.

"This is an exciting time for ME.GLAD." Ralph says, "Starting off like we did from the beginning and letting it grow into new habitats."

Their full catalogue is available on their website (www.meglad.com) along with their full list of shop carriers, (or "Breeders", as what they're called). Orders can also be made on their website.

If you'd like more information about Me.Glad, check out their photos on Instagram (@megladbrand), like them on Facebook, follow them on Twitter and/or email them through info@meglad.com.