

Sunny's Hair Wigs Suggests the Best Products for Your Indian Hair Extensions

Written by Australian Business

ATLANTA, GA, September 26, 2013 /24-7PressRelease/ -- When you make the investment in getting the highest quality virgin hair extensions

, you want to be sure that you are using the best possible products to care for that hair. The experts at Sunny's Hair & Wigs recommend using products that are designed for keeping hair at its healthiest when caring for your hair extensions.

Indian hair extensions can be treated almost identically to your natural hair--with a little extra love. You should shampoo and condition them as you would your natural hair with sulfate-free shampoos and use lightweight conditioners. Sulfates are harsh cleaners, and they can damage the color and quality of your extensions and your natural hair, so they should be avoided. Lightweight conditioners help to keep your extensions looking beautiful without weighing your hair down.

Sunny's Hair & Wigs has seen good results from the sulfate-free shampoos that Enjoy, Mastey and Bioken offer, but typically any sulfate-free shampoo will be higher quality and just as ideal for your human hair extensions . For conditioners, the experts at Sunny's Hair & Wigs like gentle leave-in conditioners best.

In addition to regularly using conditioner after washing your hair, it is important to treat your extensions to a little extra love by providing them with deep conditioning treatments once every week or two because they are not able to receive the conditioning your scalp provides through its natural oils. Coconut oil is a great leave-in conditioner for your Indian clip-in extensions and for your natural hair. Apply the oil either warm or at room temperature and leave it in for a minimum of 30 minutes. Wash as normal.
