

RAMP Sports Begins OEM Production

Written by Australian Business

PARK CITY, UT, September 28, 2013 /24-7PressRelease/ -- RAMP Sports is pleased to announce that it has begun development and production on three separate OEM orders for the upcoming '13/'14 Winter Season, illustrating the adaptability of RAMP's patent pending production methods, as well as highlighting the relevance of US ski manufacturing.

"OEM production has always been part of our strategy," said Mike Kilchenstein, Founder and CESnow of RAMP Sports. "With our new machinery and efficient production process, it has finally become a reality. Our goal for the '13/'14 season was to do 15% of our production in OEM and we've met that goal. We are really excited it includes export business with very big growth potential on a state of the art ultralight alpine touring ski."

OEM orders for winter '13/'14 include runs of Bud Light branded skis and snowboards, Midwest based Iridium Skis has contracted for five models of skis, and the French company Raid Light which has tasked RAMP to make the world's lightest alpine touring ski. The export to France marks a significant moment in US production and represents a modest reversal in the ski manufacturing trend.

With this season's orders already in place, RAMP has already seen a great deal of interest from several national and international brands for winter '14/'15, attracted to their state-of-the-art facility, quality product and industry leading environmental practices.
