Written by Australian Business

ATLANTA, GA, September 28, 2013 /24-7PressRelease/ -- Voice4Nations.org is the non-profit outreach of virtual phone service company VoiceNation, America's telecommunications leader in virtual PBX, voicemail, and innovative live answering solutions.

Voice4Nations encouraged and provided each volunteer an opportunity to do something nice for someone else as a random act of kindness. Each volunteer came up with a creative way to pay it forward and positively impacted the life of someone else in the local community when they least expected it.

The Voice4Nations team found many ways to pay it forward, such as providing lawn maintenance to elders, buying shoes for children in need, giving money directly to a homeless person, purchasing gasoline so an unemployed neighbor could get to a job interview, and helped support a family's monthly daycare bill.

"This was a special opportunity for our team, but the ultimate reward was knowing we made a difference, big or small, in the life of a perfect stranger. It's our hope that the person on the receiving end will 'pay it forward' as well, and together, we can make the world a better place for those in it," noted Jay Reeder, founder of Voice4Nations.

About Voice4Nations A new generation of Voice4Nations.org website has been launched to address the company's three key initiatives: homelessness, the world's water crisis and bullying prevention.

Voice4Nations, the non-profit outreach of VoiceNation, acts as a voice for the nations - a voice for those who can't speak for themselves, like the 50 percent of all children who live in poverty. Voice4Nations' goal is to create awareness, encourage people to make a difference, and connect them with successful organizations where they can make a contribution directly funding the need.
