

SAN FRANCISCO, CA, October 02, 2013 /24-7PressRelease/ -- Producers of two of the largest haunted house companies in the SF Bay Area - GYRO's Fear Factory and Fear Overload Scream Park - stated Friday that they will be partnering up for October 2014. "We've kept this a secret for the past six months; but today, we announce that GYRO's Fear Factory finally will be returning to restore its former glory," says Nathan Polanco, producer of Fear Overload Scream Park. "This year, Fear Overload Scream Park is set to have a breathtaking show. With the help of GYRO's producer, Fear Overload Scream Park is now so massive and horrifying, that we probably have the best haunted house theme park in all of California," boasts Polanco. Polanco also says that his haunted houses even rival those of Universal Studios down in Southern California.

Fear Overload Scream Park is open on most nights from September 28th through November 2nd from 7pm to late. A complete schedule of dates and times is available on the website.

"This year we've gone all out. We've invested another half a million dollars into special effects and the sets to create the most realistic experience. Get ready to walk through a horror movie," exclaims Polanco. Fear Overload's haunted houses are claimed to contain graphic material and to be only suitable for mature audiences, as their website states. Additionally, they do not recommend admittance to pregnant women or anyone with heart or respiratory problems. "If you're under 16 years old, pregnant, or faint at heart, then don't even show up," exclaims Polanco.
