ATLANTA, GA, October 03, 2013 /24-7PressRelease/ -- On October 27, 2013 at 4:00 pm, the Clark Angels Credit Foundation (CACF) is helping to raise money towards the fight against Bullying amongst children and teens in our community. A portion of the money raise will be donated to two local organization, the founder of BFAM, Monique Rivarde (Bobby Tillman's mother) and the Push Back Project to further their cause in the fight against bullying. This awesome energy-filled event will be held at the Holiday Inn Express, 2920 Clairemont Road NE, Atlanta, Georgia. For more info visit <http://www.clarkangelscredit.org/events>.

CACF goal is to "promote stability and growth in the community in educating our youth and adults on how to build a solid financial foundation by managing their finances, through budgeting, building their credit, and setting attainable goals." Along with promoting credit awareness and offering financial management education, we organize fundraiser events in the community to help fund our mission. We also help to promote the economic growth of small businesses in the community by offering them a variety of marketing opportunities at our events, and we play a key role in increasing social unity amongst the community by bringing people out to fellowship at our fun and social events, educational programs, or even to assist in giving back or lending a helping hand to the community.
