STONE MOUNTAIN, GA, October 04, 2013 /24-7PressRelease/ -- From following celebrities on Twitter to reading a friend's new blog post, social media has become an influential part of our everyday lives. With all these advancements in technology, it makes it easier and easier to be plugged in to what's going on in our world. A click of a button can get you the latest news on your iPhone, and a Kindle can solve the boredom of a long workday commute. In a matter of seconds, you can "like" a friend's Facebook status or see who started following your tweets.

Technology has also made it easier to take an active interest in your health. From medical apps to mobile-friendly doctors' sites, gadgets and gizmos make sure your health is a top priority. Dr. Jawanna Wilkins, dentist in Stone Mountain, GA, also understands the importance of good dental health and wants to make it easier on her tech-savvy patients to get the information they need so that they can make the best decisions about their health at any time of the day or night.

"It's not difficult to see that technology has become a huge part of our daily lives, and I want to make sure that we stay connected with our patients even once they leave the office," says Dr. Wilkins, Stone Mountain dentist. When Dr. Wilkins isn't taking care of patients you can find her tweeting about everything from maintaining dental implants to first-hand accounts of the wonders of braces.

"Tweeting is a great way to quickly and easily provide our patients with handy tips and powerful stories to guide them towards making the right choices regarding their dental health. Since I don't see the same patients everyday, this is a great way for me to continue to provide them with the same helpful care they need without having to come into the office."

Even if you're not a Twitter follower, there are other ways to stay connected to Stone Mountain dentist, Dr. Wilkins. "We also have a mobile-friendly website that makes it easy for patients to navigate right on their smartphones," says Dr. Wilkins, Stone Mountain dentist. "They can easily access our Facebook page and our blog from the site, as well. It's now even easier to keep up-to-date on both office and dental news."
