

DUNSTABLE, ENGLAND, October 06, 2013 /24-7PressRelease/ -- Specialist research and consulting firm Futuresource announces the recent appointment of three new employees to expand its offering to clients and build upon the company's successful track record.

Phil Maddocks joins the education technology team as a market analyst, focusing primarily on mobile computing devices within compulsory education. Phil joins Futuresource following three years as a market analyst at IHS.

James Edwards joins the marketing team as a sales and marketing assistant, supporting the delivery of the company's global marketing strategy. Prior to his appointment at Futuresource, James worked within the marketing function of a worldwide travel company.

Nicky Price joins the broadcast equipment team as a research analyst tracking pro monitor and camcorder markets. Nicky joins Futuresource after graduating from Swansea University, where he studied economics.

These three new appointments ensure that Futuresource will continue to deliver the highest levels of service to its client base and provide market knowledge, forecasts and timely strategic support across the entire research and analysis chain.
