

NEW HAVEN, CT, October 13, 2013 /24-7PressRelease/ -- Prosthodontics are a facet of dentistry involving the creation, design and placement of artificial teeth and other parts of the mouth. While all dentists can practice prosthodontics after dental school, all dentists are not prosthodontists. Prosthodontists pursue extra education in the area. The American Dental Association must accredit these programs. Board Certified Prosthodontists, such as Dr. Frank Maratta, fulfill other requirements as well.

"Prosthodontics involve a lot more than maintaining dental health," said Dr. Maratta, New Haven cosmetic dentist. "Prosthodontics involve creating the perfect balance between your natural teeth and artificial enhancements. I want to design your vision, restore and enhance your smile with everything I have learned. Ultimately, I want my patients to be confident that their new smiles are going to look and feel as natural as possible."

Dr. Maratta works out of New Haven Prosthodontics. He offers a number of services, such as: teeth whitening, tooth-colored fillings, caps, dental implants, cosmetic contouring, custom dentures, oral appliances, full mouth rehabilitation and Maxillofacial prosthetics.

"Sometimes enhancing teeth or providing artificial teeth isn't enough. Sometimes our gums and other parts of our mouths can affect our smiles and appearance," said Dr. Maratta. He is prepared to examine the full range of possibilities and treat his patients accordingly.

For residents looking for a cosmetic dentist in New Haven who specializes in restorative dental practices, prosthodontist Dr. Maratta is an exceptional choice. "My goal is to provide my patients with the highest quality care and treatment available," said Dr. Maratta.

For more information or to make an appointment, patients can visit his website at <http://www.nhpros.com> or contact Dr. Maratta's office at 203-773-1701. New patients must fill out preliminary forms detailing their dental and medical history. These can be filled out in person or ahead of time. All forms are available on his website.
