

BOYNTON BEACH, FL, October 13, 2013 /24-7PressRelease/ -- Floridians are no strangers to tans. The Florida sun is so popular, tourists flock to it from all over the country. Unfortunately, not all tans are created equal. Tans on teeth are far from coveted. That is why Dr. Peter Silberstein is prepared to combat dull or stained teeth with advanced light technology.

"Over time, our teeth begin to darken" said Dr. Silberstein, Boynton Beach dentist. "This happens for a variety of reasons. It can happen because our enamel wears down and the dentin, the second and darker layer of teeth, becomes stained or more visible. It can also happen because of poor oral hygiene or enjoying too many staining products like coffee. Smoking cigarettes is also a big culprit."

Whatever the cause, Dr. Silberstein is an alternative to tanned teeth, offering Power Whitening to patients interested in teeth whitening in Boynton Beach. The procedure involves light-activated whitening solution. The treatment is painless and relaxing. Patients are given protective gear to wear to shield their eyes and face from the light appropriately. A protective solution is also applied to the lips and nose.

Once settled and comfortable, Dr. Silberstein applies a protective gel to the gums and then the specially formulated whitening gel. Patients can expect their teeth to become five to ten shades whiter. Patients with darker stains or trouble spots may be given additional at-home instructions or require an additional session.

Along with Power Whitening, Dr. Silberstein offers comprehensive general and cosmetic dentistry. This includes specialty services like Invisalign, custom dentures, Maxillofacial surgery, gum alterations, dental implants and veneers. Dr. Silberstein is an experienced dentist who has served the Palm Beach County area since 1987, making him an ideal choice for Boynton Beach teeth whitening. Additionally, he has an ever-growing collection of glowing reviews. One patient even calls him "the dentist all others should aspire to be."
