

CLEVELAND, OH, May 24, 2014 /24-7PressRelease/ -- Award winning author Emeka Iwenofu appeared on The Authors Show to discuss his inspirational book for kids, "Francine's Miracle". In the interview he discussed the traits and skills necessary to create success, regardless of a child's circumstances or challenges. Above all else, Iwenofu believe that success is possible for anyone in any circumstance if the individual is willing to show perseverance - and it all begins with teachers, parents and grandparents.

"The main element that distinguishes successful people from unsuccessful people is their thinking," Iwenofu stated. "It's simple. Successful people tend to have access to the right kind of information, and when they get it, they apply it, versus unsuccessful people whose only information is gained through television, television news, the radio, and conventional schools who offer misleading and often little information on the ways one can achieve their goals and dreams as the successful people have. This was the reason why I created a trilogy series called 'The Miracle Trilogy', which tells the lives of three different women in different eras who were afflicted with their own pain and challenges before being enlightened on the secret by someone else. By applying the principles, they gained success and wisdom before teaching the next underprivileged person, from which she can make a lasting impact on her life and impact the next person; sort of as a pay it forward thing, Through this method, it indicates to anyone what can be done with thought and to never use their current situation as an excuse not to succeed if they really want to. The books written are discussed in a logical format that will impact the lives of any reader while equipping him or her with the tools necessary for achieving their own success in life as described in the books."

In the tradition of his mentors, Og Mandino, Anthony Robbins, Napoleon Hill and Wayne Dyer, Emeka Iwenofu teaches young readers through inspirational books and engaging works of fiction how to achieve their life goals despite limitations or challenges.

"Parents, grandparents, children and teachers will enjoy this inspirational book" Iwenofu continued, "because it is displayed in a story form - as an indirect guide to the reader on how they can achieve their goals regardless of their current situation that they, their family members or students are in. 'Francine's Miracle' demonstrates how anyone can still triumph to ultimate glory and greatness, regardless of their current status in life or in the classroom."

"Francine's Miracle" is a part of the Miracle Trilogy, which also includes 'Jackie's Miracle' and 'Mandi's Miracle'. 'Jackie's Miracle' was published in July of 2012 and is available now. 'Mandi's Miracle' is scheduled for release later this year.

Emeka Iwenofu is available for media interviews and can be reached using the information below or by email at jackiesmiracle@gmail.com. All of his works are available at most online book outlets including Amazon and Barnes and Noble. More information is available at the website.

Emeka Iwenofu lives in Cleveland where he attended Cuyahoga Community College before transferring to Cleveland State University where he earned his degree in Accounting. He eventually found his true calling as a writer.

He was inspired to write the three book series that he calls 'The Miracle Trilogy'.

Since publishing Francine's Miracle, Emeka has appeared on numerous radio stations, sharing his mission and sharing his message of positive thinking, spirituality and proven self help techniques with people all over the world. He was recently chosen as one of '50 Great Writers You Should Be Reading'. His story is featured in the 2013 - 2014 edition of '50 Great Writers You Should Be Reading'.

Virtually all the material contained within his books are techniques he endorses and continues to model in his daily life as the fundamental principles needed for anyone to achieve success in life. He sincerely hopes that reader's lives can be changed for the better, enriching both their lives and others around them.