JUPITER, FL, June 04, 2014 /24-7PressRelease/ -- Weiss Research today announced the launch of the company's new education division, known as The Weiss Center for Investor Advancement. The purpose of The Weiss Center for Investor Advancement is to fill the current perceived void of high-level education in the investing and trading marketplace, specifically in the wealth building and wealth preservation phases.

The goal of The Weiss Center for Investor Advancement is to introduce the world's most knowledgeable, experienced investor educators to the thousands, and perhaps millions, of investors and traders seeking to take control of their financial futures. These highly successful investor educators bring to the table literally hundreds of years of real-world experience, and will be hand-picked by The Weiss Center for Investor Advancement management to become members of the training faculty.

According to Bill Wade, Director of Education at the new company division: "The Weiss Center for Investor Advancement has been a personal burning desire of mine for many months. There is indeed a gaping void in the investor education space right now, and I am firmly committed to our new education division completely filling that void." "It is an opportunity of immense proportions, obviously for us here at Weiss Research, but also for our prospective customers - the millions of investors, traders, and perhaps most importantly -(according to Pew Research Center, 10,000 Baby Boomers turning 65 each and every day for the next 19 years), who are tremendously concerned about their financial futures. We fully intend to assuage those concerns with the quality of products and service we will provide at The Weiss Center for Investor Advancement."

The Weiss Center for Investor Advancement will cover the full spectrum of investing and trading, and will provide premier training courses, webinars and live seminars in the areas of stock investing and trading, options trading, futures trading, precious metals investing, real estate investing, commodities trading, 401K and IRA investing and trading, Forex trading, and other areas.
